Introduction

The present document is intended to address the class implementations of the final project of the Specialization in teaching and learning English as a foreign language, entitled “Developing intercultural awareness in high school ESL students through cultural elements expressed in lyrics.”; a didactic sequence was carefully planned by the author of the project (so named from now on) from the selection of materials to the follow-up activities that are meant to further monitor the earlier learning, acquisition and awareness. The project is a compilation of the areas of knowledge in which the Specialization is conformed and put into practice under the best teaching practices learned to be successfully completed. The document covers the theories, principles, and approaches regarding learning acquisition, approaches, and methodologies for the four English skills, and reflects on the intercultural competences and the testing tools to measure students’ development and progress.

It is remarkable to say that one of the challenges the author of the project faced during the Specialization, was the study of the theories, methods, and approaches concerning the language learning and teaching, how to focus in each of them and be able to differentiate them. Without a doubt, it (as it is planned to be shown along the present document) deepened the author’s knowledge on her area of studying and brought out the fact that neither one’s current English level of proficiency, nor the experience is everything that is required in order to successfully teach the language.

On the other hand, it was an arduous task for the author to try out procedures and observe herself in every step of the lesson, to be aware of what was going on in the session and at the same time observe the Ss’ reactions towards the designed materials, collect evidences for the assignments and follow the lesson plan as arranged. On the other hand, it was magical to see the methodological remarks actually taking place in class and be able to identify them, such situations are well described in this paper.

The document is divided into five chapters designed to provide a detailed account of the project’s planning and to highlight the framework and context in which it was implemented.

The first chapter begins by examining the author's identity and teaching philosophy and how it has been reshaped in light of what she has learned throughout her specialization. In addition, the author discusses her own definitions of her teaching context and how much it has changed and adapted due to the current global pandemic, a situation that has also challenged her teaching philosophy. In addition, the theoretical foundations underlying her teaching practice are discussed as part of her new teaching style.

Chapter two focuses on the design of a useful lesson plan adapting it to the teaching context and the students' needs because it is crucial that the teacher makes sure the material is understandable input for the students to enjoy. The lesson plan includes a detailed description of each of the activities, duration and objective, and analyzes the rationale behind them going from teaching vocabulary to prepare learners for interactions in the real world through authentic material, which as Jeremy Harmer stated, it is unlikely to be simplified, spoken slowly, or to be full of simplistic content (6). The follow-up activities are described, and the author explains the way she inserted the cultural component in the project. Moreover, a deep analysis on the expected outcomes on processes and attitudes is performed. Then, every activity is explained in design and rationale.

Another fundamental thing to point out is that the four skills were integrated using technology and one of the end products of the project was the realization of a video, showing the careful sequence of activities, the design of the digital resources used in the class implementations and the most memorable moments of the lesson. Consequently, the link to the video is provided along with the video concept in which brainstorm took place. On the other hand, chapter two includes the design of the necessary tools to assess and test the progress of students. Several assessment models are explained, discussed, and designed based on international standards and the way they were implemented is explained in detail. The analysis about the expected and the real outcomes is performed, included even the most subjective evaluation about the students' attitudes towards intercultural competence. In addition, rationale behind every tool in order to fulfill the expectations is provided as well as the reason why each tool is considered meaningful and useful.

Chapter three looks at a deep reflection and analysis of the results of carrying out the activities and focuses on contrasting the results, the expected and the real outcomes.

Chapter four draws the conclusions and allows the reader to review some of the ideas dealt with in the document, being a tool for a deep reflection and analysis of both, the teacher and students' performance, the suitability of the activities and the sequence in which the contents of the lesson were successfully completed. It also summarizes every step of the learning process, intake, acquisition of the language and awareness of the intercultural elements.

Chapter five shows a list of references covering the APA style.

Furthermore, attached evidences are part of the whole document so that a clear idea of the procedures is given about the classes conducted on May 17th and 20th from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. as well as the follow-up activities, all of them implemented via online.

CHAPTER 1. Philosophy and theory.

1.1 The author's language learning context

The author of the project's English language learning, dates back to her goes back to his childhood when he went to a private school for nuns in the first year of primary school, and there she had her first contact with the English language and in her adolescence, being exposed to the language through English music. Back in those days, she felt an intrinsic motivation to be able to understand the lyrics and what they meant, in other words, she was curious and interested in learning the language. Despite the fact she had English lessons in secondary and high school, in the university I didn't have formal teaching either, they were only semi-formal courses or with that you could take the exam to obtain your diploma, as a requirement for your degree. I have always been in courses that did not fulfill what I wanted to know, I learned from the little bit of each course I enrolled in. Throughout the course of the author's life, she has not had a formal apprenticeship, in her professional life she had to go to CECATI to take English courses to obtain the diplomas and levels required by Conalep, so that she could teach the classes they were proposing to her. Nevertheless, she found it difficult to apply rules, especially when it came to speaking, as she felt a bit anxious because she had to get an oral grade in every class and that made her nervous and afraid of making a mistake in front of her classmates. After several months at CECATI, she obtained the document she needed. Even so, the author feels that she is not 100% in the language, she wants to continue learning, without having to hesitate when speaking, it is one of her terrors. But she set her mind that if she wants to complete a goal, she has to achieve it with effort, discipline and dedication, so that later she will be able to cover all the required language skills. Therefore, the author remains motivated to obtain the success she requires just as Jeremy Harmer stated about students' response to their learning experiences and how this makes them feel about themselves (6). That wave of motivation surrounded her, so her level of helplessness went down, and her self-confidence went up. The affective filter was occurring at that moment, and she was more sympathetic to the language.

The process of learning an additional language to Spanish was a conscious process for the writer in which she tried to learn and memorize rules (in the early period) from her teachers who tended to work guided by structuralism. Therefore, the understanding of most grammar rules even though Ss were not able to produce or comprehend English itself, was the most important goal for most of the teachers. Reflecting on that, the author can clearly see what Stephen Krashen stated as the difference between learning and acquiring because having the theory is not the same as knowing how to use it in a real situation. Based on that, the best memories the author has from her English teachers are those moments where they offered a context and asked for dialogues centered on communicative functions where Ss could interact with their classmates and above all, they, as teachers, encouraged them to work with the language. Looking backwards, in the last levels of the author's training, the teachers were using the communicative approach, which the author tried to imitate later even though she had to make some adjustments.

1.2 The author's teaching context.

The author's teaching context has been transforming since she started this Specialization. She is working in two different scenarios at the same time, at Universidad del Pacifico, and at Conalep 155 Salina Cruz. The university and high school face-to-face classes have been adapted to be taught online due to the pandemic we are facing in the world. This pandemic has shown us that if we do not have a physical place to teach, we should be creative, selective with the material and learn to use technological apps that allow us to communicate with our Ss and help them not to feel helpless or lost when "there is no teacher" with them all the time. The author indicates that it has been a pleasant experience to have videoconferences, design materials to be completed or played online, asses Ss through those tools and try to keep the interaction and motivation.

On the one hand, her teaching context at Conalep used to allow her to propose some activities online, thanks to the Wi-Fi connection, although it did not work all the time and sometimes, so the teacher had to go back to the traditional classroom activities. Conalep is a public high school with nearly 800 students. The institution promotes the cultural exchange of language students through the Jóvenes en Acción program. In this program there is a teacher in charge of tutoring the students in the language advancement and they can make the cultural exchange to the United States of America.

The facilities where we work are classrooms with air conditioning and good lighting, although we do not have a space or language lab, since the only computer center we have is used for the computer and accounting specialties. This means that the students must work with their cell phones or laptops, or in the traditional way, with a CD recorder and copies of the exercises. In this teaching context, the English curriculum classes are large, with between 20 and 40 students, which makes teaching and learning difficult for the students, not all students take private classes, what is learned is through the school. What is more, the English academy works with the same pedagogical guides and study programs, since three years ago, the Conalep just updated the study programs, but the books that the high school handles lack complete topics. Unfortunately, 70% of English teachers do not have any formal preparation in teaching foreign languages, which is one of the reasons why the author of this document decided to study this Specialization.

The above context has changed completely in the last three months, the teacher has been working with her Ss via online through different apps, the first one is WhatsApp, in which both, the teacher and the students are in communication all the time, they also use Zoom cloud meetings and Teams to have a videocall at the usual class schedule. Therefore, the activities have been adapted in order to use technology not only for some activities like they used to do in the classroom. For instance, instead of working with the textbook, the teacher designed a blog in which the readings are included; the grammar and vocabulary exercises are not completed in the notebook but on Educaplay, Sounter, Lyricsgap or Socrative in order to have the scores immediately. The writing tasks have been performed in Google Documents so that the teacher has the chance to monitor the Ss' production when working individually and what is more, Ss can work collaboratively and Google Documents manages to assign each user with a color, so it is easier to identify each one's production.

The teacher used to design her own resources and reuse them whenever she wanted, she always offers the Ss online assistance on WhatsApp or Facebook and send them extra online exercises to practice. Video phone calls are made when it is necessary and the teacher and Ss are always in touch in case Ss have any doubt. Nowadays, all the classes are being held online and all the materials have been adapted to be used online too.

Obviously, there are some drawbacks in both scenarios. Some Conalep Ss do not have access to internet all the time, or experience connection issues when the platforms are too busy supporting too many users and it is time-consuming when you switch between activities depending on the internet connection speed. It is not quite common, but we are always exposed to have failures and unlike being in the classroom, you cannot always have a plan B.

1.3 The author's teaching philosophy.

According to the contents of the Specialization, the teaching philosophy is divided into three different dimensions: cognitive, affective and behavioral.

In the author's perspective, talking about the cognitive dimension, she has found out that the only use of a textbook in class, can be overwhelming for both, the teacher and Ss. During her current teaching situation due to the world's pandemic, and the opportunity to work online, she feels grateful for the transition through the use of technology. The writer of this paper has also been a Computer engineering teacher for years, and she has learned to value the importance of working with authentic material, and at the same time, having herself and providing the Ss the theory reflected in a real way. The teacher also considers working with authentic material, allows everybody to have a greater experience than the ordinary material, meaning that besides working with and adapting authentic material, a teacher should consider Ss' learning styles and ease the process of understanding by having different input such as listening and visual elements, besides the real language usage, vocabulary and expressions. As Stephen Krashen says, due to the i+1 theory which states that Ss should be challenged and get of their comfort zone. (8)

In her short experience as a language teacher, the author has forged a very critical view of teaching in which she considers three imperative elements to achieve educational excellence. The teacher, the students and the environment where the magic we call "learning" takes place are key elements in understanding one's own vision of teaching and learning in a foreign language classroom.

Talking about the the affective dimension, the author of this paper is certain that a teacher plays an important role in supporting Ss and should also be a good listener. That is something important for her. On the other hand, talking about work climate, the educator has had some bad experiences regarding rivalries between colleagues, which has made her feel unconfident in her performance. The good things about that are of course the supportive Ss who have shown empathy to her and have valued her effort to share her knowledge with them. The author also thinks she still has a lot to improve, that was one of the reasons to study this Specialization and even though she stopped for a while because of her work responsibilities, she is committed to finish it this time and despite the fact teaching online is a tiring activity, she has been enjoying the process of designing online material for her classes and she feels glad to take advantage of all the resources available on the internet and at the same time, increase her skills.

The author's initial training is in computer systems engineering, so she has technological knowledge and uses TIC's in her daily life. In the Conalep and in the university she teaches subjects of the computer area, for which working with authentic material and TIC's, it is not difficult for her to find applications that help her in the didactic material to teach her classes.

Regarding the third dimension of the teaching philosophy, the behavioral one, the teacher considers, it is fundamental to keep your sanity despite the fact of having personal problems, feeling tired or under pressure because of some institutional administrative paperwork and courses that you have to take at the same time than teaching. Even though it might be overwhelming, a teacher should be in one piece when being in front of the Ss.

To sum up, in this Specialization the author's teaching philosophy has changed and has been challenged to be more organized and to learn to plan her lessons in detail. She enjoys working step by step in the process of selecting material and adapting them. She has learned about the difference between a test and assessment and what is more, according to O'Malley and Valdez-Pierce, it is necessary to perform an authentic evaluation. She has not only achieved the institutional goals but encouraged Ss to get to know their own culture and respect the differences with others. She feels satisfied to see that her Ss are tolerant and respectful.

According to the author of the project, using technological applications that allow us to communicate with our students and help them not to feel helpless or lost when "there is no teacher" with them all the time. It has been a pleasant experience to have videoconferences, design materials to be completed or played online, evaluate Ss through those tools and try to maintain interaction and motivation.

The author considers what it is to teach and the role of teachers, it is important to understand that for me learning is the ability to absorb everything we have in our environment to use it for our benefit. In other words, learning is a process in which we take input to transform it into useful output. A simple example of this is when babies learn to speak. At first, they listen to every word their parents say and after a while they begin to repeat and use these words to get something (some attention, food, water, etc.). The same thing happens when people are learning a new language; they listen, repeat and then produce.

As a consequence, teaching is the ability to help others learn. As language teachers, we must help students develop their skills in our area of expertise by providing or modeling the context they need to learn a specific structure, set of vocabulary, language, etc. We create the context as we provide sufficient information for learners to assimilate the information and eventually produce the language. Every person has the ability to learn without a teacher and the digital age has changed the role of educators. This is why our role is to guide, motivate, encourage and provide information to help students excel more efficiently. Parents are also important in this process when we have young students, but from them (and I guess every teacher) they only expect commitment and respect for the teacher's work.

According to Byram, who states that when teaching a second language, you should find topics that are focused on linguistic awareness, discussion of cross-cultural experiences, stereotypes, and negotiation of meaning. Learning the cross-cultural approach that can improve the learner's knowledge in the acquisition of a second language.

1.4 The author's own view on the implementation of technology.

From the author's perspective, the implementation of technology should be based on a thorough analysis of the teaching context, which may or may not allow access to it. It is also related to the support that the school shows towards the integration of the same to strengthen the integrative projects, a situation that in the school does not have the support or infrastructure to have the use of technology in the classroom, so since the pandemic, the use of technology was present, for the development of the integrative activities of the curriculum. Seeing also the limitations that each of the students have.

On the other hand, the use of technology in the classroom brings benefits, reinforces skills, refines practices, improves confidence, skills and knowledge of teachers. However, we, as teachers, must be aware of the limitations we have in the school and try to find the ideal applications to work with, taking into account their ease of use and make sure we know how to use them to be able to teach our students.

Looking backwards, the author of this project noticed an improvement from the first assignment to the last one thanks to the integration of the assignments through technology. Thanks to the use of technology, Ss find the class interesting and are naturally motivated; it gives them a certain level of autonomy to perform some of the activities at their own pace.

1.5 The author's personal view towards assessment and evaluation.

From the author's perspective, assessing and evaluating Ss is a complex activity, which implies the evaluation of the quality of the Ss' production having some agreed criteria to be compared with. In the teacher's view, it is fundamental to expose our Ss to these kinds of activities so they become familiarized with them and do not feel anxious when they face them, but on the contrary, they see it as an everyday activity in which they have the possibility to improve and be aware of their own weaknesses and strengths. In addition, it is a way for the teacher to collect data about the Ss performances and it is also an opportunity for the teacher to interpret the results and make adjustments for the upcoming classes without forgetting about the Ss' needs. Moreover, the use of technology enhances the assessing process because both, the teacher and the Ss can have the results in real time as can be seen in the present project.

1.6 Theories underlying the teaching practice and identity.

Unquestionably, the theoretical foundations that are part of the author's teaching style and her teaching practice, have evolved during this Specialization. Therefore, they will be addressed in this section of the document.

Working with the communicative approach means that learners have elements to interact in a variety of contexts and not only know grammatical structures, as Dell Hymes said, proficiency in a language includes not only grammar, words and sounds, but also the social knowledge of when and how to use them appropriately. (9) Consequently, lessons should be tailored to these contexts, encouraging a communicative approach with a multitude of activities for situations in which learners may need to use a foreign language, such as traveling, requesting information, learning about a culture, or business.

Irrefutably, something that the writer enjoys doing even before the Specialization and in which she has progressed is in the use of authentic material. From her point of view, it provides a new level of understanding and what is more, Ss learn conventions of the language in an unconscious natural way and it is a very useful tool to make the learning process much more engaging. What the author has witnessed is that Ss are allowed to use their imagination and it motivates them to use the language when they feel confident to do it. Exposing the Ss to real language makes them be aware of words and constructions that they would not find in their ESL materials. Instead, it shows them what they need to know to have a good performance in a real situation. Based on that, the use of authentic material was implemented in the present project.

Richards and Rodgers stated that learning, according to the theory, cannot lead to acquisition (10). In general terms, the writer tries to take this into consideration every time she has a class. In her perspective, a teacher should be aware of the differences between learning and acquiring. The former occurs when learners are immersed in the target language whereas in the second one, formal guidance is needed. Accordingly, learning the grammar is not a guarantee to be able to speak and learners make an effort to really learn something, which is amazing.

One of the authors that is definitively remarkable in the author's teaching practice is Stephen Krashen, who stated that learning refers to the formal study of language rules and is a conscious process (7). However, using language communicatively is not simply a matter of producing a sequence of grammatically correct sentences. In order to perform communicative tasks in the real world, components of language should not be studied in an isolated way. That is why one of the goals for the present project is to be completely integrative.

The author of the present document is aware of the Monitor model, which consists of five hypothesis that together constitute a theory. Such theory could be observed during the assignments and projects of this Specialization.

The first hypothesis (acquisition-learning) states that language learning is the product of formal instruction and comprises a conscious process that results in conscious knowledge "about" the language, e.g., knowledge of grammatical rules, to avoid errors learners consciously try to express their ideas, and even compare the L2 with the L1 to have a better understanding.

The second hypothesis (natural order) states that acquisition occurs in a predictable order; for example, to learn the present simple, learners first learn to use the verb and then can use adverbs of frequency, to write routine sentences.

The monitor's hypothesis states that fluency in L2 is the result of what learners have acquired over time by using some structures consciously and, at the same time, they want to be accurate according to the rules they have learned. For example, when studying the present simple and adverbs of frequency in the present project, they put into practice their previous knowledge (acquired over at least one semester) about verb tense and follow the new rules to indicate what someone else has said.

The input hypothesis focuses on the way we acquire language. It is related to the kind of input learners are exposed to, always taking into account the need to receive comprehensible input from the current level +1 (a structure beyond what they currently know). During the assignments and projects, it could be seen the relevance of exposing Ss to complex exercises, reading and listening activities in order for them not to get bored, but instead, feel challenged.

Finally, the affective filter hypothesis, states that some elements such as motivation, self-confidence and low anxiety contribute to successfully acquire the language. During the class implementations it was remarkable the way it works when Ss feel confident about what they are doing, when they know what requirements they are expected to fulfill, when they are given freedom to answer the activities at their own pace and allow themselves to enjoy the process.

On the other hand, speaking a foreign language means not only to be able to communicate without breakdowns and know the grammar (linguistic competence), or to understand Hyme's theory of communicative competence in which he states we need to know where and when to use the language.

1.7 Intercultural competence.

Speaking a foreign language also means to show curiosity for the native-speaker country and be willing to understand the beliefs and values that characterize people from there. Furthermore, it is important to be open and show ability to know their practices and consequently, be able to evaluate critically and not only to criticize the way things are done; this is what Michael Byram's model of intercultural competence states. In other words, we need to learn about the target culture. In order to do this, we should focus on five characteristics:

- Intercultural attitudes. It refers to acting without prejudice and trying to learn about cultures (including your own) and new things you may encounter. (With the present project, the author hopes that students will try to understand the cultural habits between English and Americans, cosmopolitan city (New York), British icons, and cultural immigrant motifs, with music inspiring them to learn a little about English and American cultures).
- Knowledge of social groups. It means knowing the target culture.
- Interpretation and relationship skills. This characteristic invites us to take into account the perspective of other people.
- Discovery and interaction skills. The objective is to use the information in real contexts.

- Critical cultural awareness. In order not to react negatively to habits, cultural differences, and immigrants, we must be aware of our differences, that each person has different values, thoughts. Importantly, we are not expected to change our own values, but to be aware of them.

Based on this model, the author expects Ss not to have native speaker proficiency, but to be intercultural speakers. In order to achieve this, the English classes must consider different practices to socialize our Ss into a culture through related elements such as music. Nevertheless, we should first be aware of our own identity; both, the teacher and Ss must be aware of the fact that it is influenced by habits, cosmopolitan city, immigrant culture, etc. Therefore, it happens the same in other cultures and we have to learn to build understandings with members of other cultures by examining our and their own motives, beliefs and practices, that is to say, to understand their point of view even though it is different from ours.

To sum up, our Ss interpret the world from different points of view when they live international relationships, therefore, it is fundamental not to focus only in the functional uses of language but we, as teachers, should encourage positive attitudes towards other countries and foreign cultures. We should also dismiss the idea of a native speaker as a reference point for our learners because they are individuals who bring their own experience. In other words, when interaction between people from different countries takes place, those people bring knowledge from their own cultural background, that is to say, their social identity.

The present project's objective is to focus not exclusively on the language as communication but to facilitate knowledge of other cultures and involve learners through authentic texts, videos and create an environment of curiosity and enquiring in order to guide Ss to the intercultural competence.

1.7.1 Cultural concept.

Habits

In this project talks about the cultural habits between English and Americans, the English have habit of drinking tea, and Americans do not have the same habit, they like coffee. In Mexico we have very different habits and routines, in the previous text was made the differences that the English have with the Americans on the habit of the drink that most consume. In Mexico the most predominant is coffee, there are several coffee producing states, but not only that is in Mexico, there are also pre-Hispanic drinks with cocoa, for example in Oaxaca is the Tejate is a cold Zapotec drink, made with corn, mamey, cocoa, cocoa Rosita and sugar.

It is famous for its purity and has a fair in Los Angeles, California. Bupu is a drink of gods and emperors in the Istmo de Tehuantepec, it is a white atole foam made with cinnamon, cocoa and flower petals. Champurrado, the mixture of atole and chocolate tablets. It is whipped with a grinder and is famous throughout the country. Pozol, a frothy drink made with fermented corn balls, mixed with cocoa and sweetened with cane sugar. It is also known as chorote. (22)

Cosmopolitan city

Unlike other cosmopolitan cities, Mexico City has it all and more. The city has grown so much that it has had to adapt to the socio-economic development of its buildings and skyscrapers. In the face of this, the space has had to go through a whole socio-cultural process of adaptation, bringing its ancestors and beliefs to the peak of modernity. It is as if it were a kind of pre-Hispanic mysticism that bewitches every corner of the city. Both its ancestral history and its powerful adaptability to modern life have turned the capital of Mexico into the New York of Latin America.

Avenida de la Reforma is Mexico's version of Wall Street. Paseo de la Reforma is a mythical avenue. On it are immortalized events, heroes, architectural styles, Manhattan? Hello, Santa Fe! Santa Fé used to be a landfill, this site became a magnet for companies, shopping malls and prestigious universities. Here are the national and regional headquarters of several national and foreign companies, residential subdivisions.

What's up, Condesa - Roma? The area now occupied by this neighborhood was once part of the numerous properties of a wealthy noblewoman, the Countess of Miravalle, who lived in Mexico City in the 18th century. Mexico is the Latin American city with the most museums and galleries in the world. You don't need a boat to get to the Statue of Liberty; Mexico simply has the ancient trajineras of Xochimilco. Central Park? Chapultepec Forest, Coyoacan and Alameda Central. Chapultepec has the largest forest in all of Latin America, contains the only castle in the country. And it has the best bars in the world, Garibaldi, the limits comprise the historical monumental zone of the pre-Hispanic era. (23)

Cultural Icons.

Mexico City has several cultural icons, among them is the Torre Mayor, which is 225.4 meters tall and is the largest in the country and one of the largest in Latin America. The Hemicycle to Juarez, this monument honors the memory of President Benito Juarez. It is located on one of the sides of the Alameda. Palacio Nacional is located in the heart of the city. It was the second residence of Hernan Cortes in the country, who had it built on top of the house of Moctezuma Xocoyotzin. The Zocalo is called Plaza de la Constitucion because that is where the Spanish Constitution was sworn in, which was promulgated in Cadiz in 1812. These are some of the icons that Mexico City has to offer. (24)

Immigration culture.

The foreign immigrants who settled in Mexico organized themselves communally and created institutions to solve their health problems, economic needs, as well as care for the elderly, widows and children, in order to prolong their identity and culture of education. When immigration from different parts of the world came to Mexico, it was not a rich country and the historical intolerance towards any religion other than Catholicism prevented the massive arrival of foreigners who wanted to settle in the country. The decree of freedom of worship, during the time of Juarez, marked an important opening towards this social phenomenon. During the Porfiriato period, it was not only allowed, but it was also promoted through colonization projects. (25)

CHAPTER 2. Methodology and practice.

The teacher conducted four English classes that were implemented online with high school students, Level A2. The students are studying Tourism and this is their fourth semester. We have been working online since last year. The tools used to implement the classes were Youtube, Educaplay, Google docs, Lyricsgaps, Blogger, Sounter, Socrative for evaluation, and Zoom.

In the sessions, students' schemas were activated by introducing students to the vocabulary of the culture. The students did the authentic reading material activity. Students completed the gap-filling exercise to review present simple verbs and vocabulary related to cultural differences. Through the video guide, activities were conducted to activate listening and writing skills to expose students to authentic material. Students were encouraged to talk about the history of an iconic British place and to give their opinion about the exposed video. This activity aimed to activate speaking skills.

Finally, students write a text using the present simple and adverbs of frequency to give their conclusions about the four sessions.

2.2 Teaching sequence template.

|--------------------------------|---|
| Intercultural component | The teacher will insert the cultural component, based on the context of cultural habits between the British and Americans, cosmopolitan city (New York), cultural icons and immigrants. Another topic that is addressed during the classes, the different drinks that the British drink, it will always be tea and the Americans coffee, seeing how many drinks we have in our country, each state has different traditional drinks. So you saw the video of Englishman in New York, which told the anecdote |
|--------------------------------|---|

|---------------------------------------|--|
| | that he felt like an alien, because the American customs were different from that of an English person. And with Frank Sinatra's lyrics he nicknamed New York the city that never sleeps, because it is always open 24/7. On the other hand, The Beatles released the hit song Strawberry Field Forever, these lyrics were written by John Lennon, who used to visit this iconic place in Liverpool in his childhood. The Pet Shop Boys with the lyrics of New York City Boy talk about a young man who talks about New York, that it is a city that you will never get bored, and that there is a world of immigrants from different cultures living in New York. |
| Evaluation of the cultural component. | Students recognize new perspectives on cultural norms from other places. Identify components of other cultural perspectives, such as habits, cosmopolitan New York City, British icons, and immigrant culture. Distinguish the different habits between the English and Americans. Show curiosity (ask questions) about what they did not know about New York, and the habits of the English such as the taste for tea. Express interest in visiting or living in New York. To assess interculturality to students through their attitudes to know, know, visit, or live in a foreign country, know all about its culture, be influenced by the music, and be liked. |
| Conclusion | The conclusion will be addressed with a collaborative writing piece in which students discuss the different habits between the English and Americans, the city that never sleeps (New York), British cultural icons, immigrant culture. |
| Follow-up activities | After the teacher reviews the collaborative writing and gives feedback, students analyze the differences between Americans, English and Mexicans, and come to the conclusion that as Mexicans we have a great culture, cosmopolitan cities, cultural icons, and immigration from various countries around the world. |

|--|---|
| | And the music they heard about these differences, they liked, even some of the students, adopted a letter of the group Pet Shop Boys, in their musical taste. |
|--|---|

NOTE: It is essential to mention that the teacher gives the students feedback in each activity, on grammar, vocabulary, pronunciation (without interrupting each participation but explaining the general errors at the end of the activity). As for the writing activities, students work with the error code, so they are able to correct them by themselves after the teacher has made comments and corrections.

2.3 Designed activities for the project.

The lessons addressed in the present document were implemented using the following sequence of activities that have been designed to work with the four skills of the language (speaking, writing, reading, and listening). Furthermore, a cultural topic is presented to the students, everything within the framework of the program used at Conalep 155 Salina Cruz. The following materials have been originally designed or adapted from the textbook and authentic material. Everything is integrated using technology and different apps that have contributed to the best practices to be implemented during this Specialization.

2.3.1 PowerPoint presentation. What is culture?

| PowerPoint presentation "Online classes_Project" Main file to teach the class | According to the University of Leicester, PowerPoint is a computer program that allows you to create and show slides. Moreover, you can combine text, graphics and multimedia content to create professional presentations. (20) Thanks to that, the teacher can structure her oral presentation, which is very useful nowadays due to the pandemic we are living in Mexico and the conditions we have for our online classes. A visual impact is important to remember things, so it is useful for both, the Ss and the teacher. This presentation allows the teacher to guide the class via |

2.3.2 Words and definitions related to American and British culture.

|---|---|
| Activity designed in Educaplay | As it is stated by Zhen (11), students have a positive attitude towards computer technology used in the classroom. The use of multimedia makes Ss feel stimulated and it is another good way to remember things visually or aurally. Moreover, fostering these activities through the use of technology is relevant for Ss and they show enthusiasm towards answering online and having the opportunity to see the other Ss' results. Technology refines teaching and provides a sense of innovation. |

2.3.3 Reading comprehension. History of the tea drinking in England. (Authentic Material)

|------------------------------|---|
| Activity designed in Blogger | Blogs are a different way to reach our students and, according to the website "Benefits of blogs in education" (21), blogs motivate students to become better readers |

| | and writers. They also promote discussion. In the present class, it will be used to expose a first opinion about the history of tea drinking in England and its influence among the English and at the end of the sessions, when more context and information is available, Ss are expected to answer the questions and respond what they understood about the drink influencing the English. The teacher also chose this option because we have been working remotely. In addition, blogs are great for practicing a relevant English skill: writing; and at the same time the Ss can increase their reading skills. In addition, the students can work autonomously and, of course, it gives them the opportunity to use the Internet. |

2.3.4. Listening the differences in culture. Englishman in New York, by Sting. (Authentic Material).

| Fill the blanks exercise in Lyricsgaps | Krashen (1980), states in his input hypothesis, that the role of listening for acquisition is undeniable. And according to Mallapiang (13), one way to prepare ESL students for encounters with real language is to apply real language or authentic speech in the ESL. This makes Ss face other accents different to their teacher's and gives them the opportunity to experience the kind of language native speakers use and of course, become good active listeners. Besides, using authentic material during the |

| | Specialization, enriched the lessons in such a way that Ss discovered they can little by little deal with native pronunciation and speed. On the other hand, selecting authentic material is a great challenge for the teacher, who has to be aware of the Ss' level and interests, which can be reached easily through the use of the internet. |

| PowerPoint presentation and document designed in Google Documents. | The evidence shows that the choice of using collaborative documents through the Specialization, gave good results, allowing both teachers and students to see the changes in a document in real time. Following the same logic of this type of activities, the Ss are expected to expose their conclusions in the proposed document and participate individually and collaboratively on the topics seen in these four sessions, about American and British customs, the city that never sleeps, British icons or the culture of immigrants in New York. |

2.6. Assessment.

2.6.1 Theoretical foundations.

According to Brown (1), we cannot think of assessing and testing as synonymous terms. Tests are instruments or procedures designed to elicit performance from learners with the purpose of measuring their attainment of specific criteria. Tests can be useful devices among other procedures and tasks designed to assess Ss. On the other hand, assessment encompasses a much wider domain than tests. Whenever a student responds to a question, offers a comment or tries out a new word or structure, the teacher assesses the student's performance.

Assessing students is not an easy task and even though our students like knowing about their performance, assessment can be taken as praise or criticism depending on the way we give feedback and it can certainly affect our students' motivation. Assessing students is not an easy task and even though our students like knowing about their performance, assessment can be taken as praise or criticism depending on the way we give feedback and it can certainly affect our students' motivation. During the classes author's, she tries to motivate her students and encourage them to get better results as a result of practice. She tends to use informal assessment, which is defined by Brown as incidental, unplanned evaluative coaching and feedback on tasks designed to elicit performance, but not for the purpose of recording results and making fixed judgements about a student's competence (1). In other words, phrases such as "excellent", "very good", "you can do it better next time" are usually helpful and students thank their effort is recognized in a certain way.

The High School students that have been assessed and tested in the present document, belong to an A2 level. It is said that in 9 out of 10 cases when a student signs up for English classes, their goal is to speak. Speaking a foreign language is very hard, so students need a great deal of motivation to encourage them to speak in English. (2)

Therefore, they need to be challenged to help them be aware of their strengths and weaknesses. In this particular case, the students that participated in the class implementation, are currently studying second semester of Tourism and are immersed in scenarios in which technology and culture is involved. Therefore, they have shown proficiency and ability to adapt and work using the apps proposed since the semester started. Noticeably, students feel confident and even excited about the fact of using technology in their English class. Consequently, working online with them, has not been an issue to deal with. Aged 15-16, and having studied English for at least one semester, their level is Elementary; A2 according to the Common European Framework of Reference for Languages (CEFR).

The book that is the base for their course is the English File Elementary Student's book. Moreover, the Teacher's book (2) which is taken as a reference, states in its introduction that intermediate students need:

Grammar

- Clear and memorable presentations of new structures
- Regular and varied practice in useful and natural contexts
- Student-friendly reference material

Vocabulary

- A focus on high-frequency words and phrases
- Opportunities to personalize new vocabulary
- Accessible reference material

Pronunciation

- A solid foundation in the sounds of English.
- Targeted pronunciation development.
- Awareness of rules and patterns.

Speaking

- Topics that will inspire students' interest
- Achievable, motivating tasks
- Regular opportunities to use new language

Listening

- A reason to listen
- Confidence-building tasks
- Help with connected speech

Reading

- Engaging topics and stimulating texts.
- Manageable tasks that help students to read.

Writing

- Clear models
- The 'nuts and bolts' of writing on a word and sentence level

Practical English

- Understanding high-frequency phrases
- Knowing what to say in typical situations

Revision

- Regular review
- Motivating reference and practice material
- A sense of progress

After having done the analysis of what the students need, I analyzed the frame of reference to know what it is that the students should be able to do in each skill.

To illustrate this, the following graphs will work to get a general idea of what they can do according to the structured overview of all CERFL scales (3):

Common reference levels. Global scale:

|----|--|
| A2 | Can understand sentences and frequently used expressions related to areas of most immediate relevance (e.g. very basic personal and family information, shopping, local geography, employment). Can communicate in simple and routine tasks requiring a simple and direct exchange of information on familiar and routine matters. Can describe in simple terms aspects of his/her background, immediate environment and matters in areas of immediate need. |
|----|--|

Qualitative aspects of spoken language use:

| | RANGE | ACCURACY | FLUENCY | INTERACTION | COHERENCE |
|-----------|-----------------------------------|-----------------------------|------------------------------------|-------------------------------------|-------------------------------|
| A2 | Uses basic sentence patterns with | Uses some simple structures | Can make him/herself understood in | Can answer questions and respond to | Can link groups of words with |

Can indicate when he/she is following but is rarely able to understand enough to keep conversation going of his/her own accord. | simple connectors like "and, "but" and "because". |

Overall written interaction

|-----------|--|
| A2 | Can write short, simple formulaic notes relating to matters in areas of immediate need. |
|-----------|--|

Overall written production

|-----------|--|
| A2 | Can write a series of simple phrases and sentences linked with simple connectors like "and", "but" and "because". |
|-----------|--|

Creative writing

|-----------|--|
| A2 | Can write about everyday aspects of his environment e.g. people, places, a job or study experience in linked sentences. |
| | Can write very short, basic descriptions of events, past activities and personal experiences. |
| | Can write a series of simple phrases and sentences about their family, living conditions, educational background, present or most recent job. |
| | Can write short, simple imaginary biographies and simple poems about people. |

Vocabulary range

|-----------|--|
| A2 | Has sufficient vocabulary to conduct routine, everyday transactions involving familiar situations and topics. |
| | Has a sufficient vocabulary for the expression of basic communicative needs. |
| | Has a sufficient vocabulary for coping with simple survival needs. |

Grammatical accuracy

|-----------|--|
| A2 | Uses some simple structures correctly, but still systematically makes basic mistakes - for example tends to mix up tenses and forget to mark agreement; nevertheless, it is usually clear what he/she is trying to say. |
|-----------|--|

Self-assessment grid

| | | A2 |
|--|---------------------------|---|
| U N D E R S T A N D I N G | Listening | I can understand phrases and the highest frequency vocabulary related to areas of most immediate personal relevance (e.g. very basic personal and family information, shopping, local area, employment). I can catch the main point in short, clear, simple messages and announcements. |
| | Reading | I can read very short, simple texts. I can find specific, predictable information in simple everyday material such as advertisements, prospectuses, menus and timetables and I can understand short simple personal letters. |
| S P E A K I N G | Spoken Interaction | I can communicate in simple and routine tasks requiring a simple and direct exchange of information on familiar topics and activities. I can handle very short social exchanges, even though I can't usually understand enough to keep the conversation going myself. |
| | Spoken Production | I can use a series of phrases and sentences to describe in simple terms my family and other people, living conditions, my educational background and my present or most recent job. |
| W R I T I N G | Writing | I can write short, simple notes and messages relating to matters in areas of immediate need. I can write a very simple personal letter, for example thanking someone for something. |

2.6.2 Traditional assessment.

The Traditional Assessment (TA), what I chose to represent this type of assessment was:

The Completion exercise in the Listening and fill in the gaps exercise based on authentic material.

For these activities, students are expected to develop their receptive skills and their understanding of adverbs of frequency, words related to the culture, verbs, and present simple through authentic material, in this case, through the songs: Englishman in New York, New York, New York, Strawberry fields forever and New York City boy.

2.6.3 Self-assessment.

It is crucial for students to identify and be aware of how confident they feel during the tests, how confident they feel knowing what to write or what to say or what grammatical structures to use.

When using Socrative, teachers are allowed to design and launch quizzes according to the students' needs, for example, they have the activity paced by the teacher. In that way, students can work at the same time or at their own rhythm. Teachers can also decide the settings of the tests, for example if they want to shuffle questions or answers or whether they want to show the final score to the students immediately.

2.6.4 Reading (Self-assessment design).

According to Brown (1), a test samples performance but infers certain competence. A language test samples language behavior and infers general ability in a language. From a reading comprehension, the examiner infers a certain level of general reading ability.

The Multiple choice exercises are used to assess reading comprehension and their characteristic is based on the fact that it has only "one correct answer" and is a quick check format, therefore the Ss have 50% of possibility to guess, situation that is seen as something subjective. Analyzing the activity (which might seem very easy to answer even without having read the text), was not necessarily used to prove the Ss' knowledge but to give direction to the topic that was mainly addressed and some of the examples of why the English like drink tea and who influenced that taste.

An additional drawback is that students are not allowed to give reasons why they choose one or the other answer.

We can say that tests in MC format focus only on language recognition and not on language production (5).

Grading this Multiple choice exercise is easier (than speaking or writing) in this exercise, the score is not taken, just knowing that students feel safe having done the activity. Furthermore, the teacher strongly believes that the use of technology enhances the assessing process because both, the teacher and the Ss can have the results immediately and talking about Socrative, each answer can be seen in real time.

2.6.6 Performance Based Assessment.

This kind of assessment is focused on use. Productive skills (writing and speaking) are tested.

The feedback during oral work is helpful, nevertheless, it can interfere with the rhythm of the presentation. Ss should be told what they are expected to do in each presentation and have the possibility to analyze their mistakes, register them or even record them to be analyzed later.

On the other hand, according to one of the most recognized methodology writers around the world, Jeremy Harmer, writing is a complex process that includes handwriting, spelling, punctuation and the construction of well-formed sentences, paragraphs, and texts (4).

For the present analysis, the PBA can be divided into two quadrants:

| Quadrant: Observation of process | |
|----------------------------------|--|
| Writing | Draft: After the four lessons planned, Ss give their opinions about American and British habits, the city that never sleeps, British icons, or immigrant culture in New York. Informal feedback is given. This first draft is based on the methodology stated by O'Malley and Valdez-Pierce. |
| | Practice 2 After receiving the informal feedback, Ss use the error code to have a better version of their writing. |
| Speaking | Practice 1 After the first two lessons about cultural habits and facts, Ss talk about them and give their opi-nion. |
| | Practice 2 After watching the video about the history of Strawberry field, the British icon, Ss give their opi-nion about what elements they think a writer needs to write. |

| Quadrant: Observation of product | |
|----------------------------------|--|
| Writing | Final product After using the error code and correct the things the teacher indicated, Ss hand in an individual writing considering the rubric about their conclusions. |
| Speaking | After the four lessons, Ss talk about their conclusions considering the elements of the rubric. |

2.6.7 Speaking (Self-assessment design).

CONCLUSIONS
About life American and British habits, the city that never sleeps, British icons, or immigrant culture in New York.

Eduardo Amador Juarez Angulo: There's no other city on the planet with an energy that can complete with New York. The fast pace, the buzzing traffic, the hustle and bustle of the people, the 24 hours life, and the creative spirit make New York City one of the most vibrant places in the world.
New York neighbors are always good to their other neighbors and to new people who come to live in New York.

Habits in Mexico:

1. The Mexicans eat just 3 times per day. All of them.
2. Heartfelt greetings are a strong part of Mexican culture.
3. The Mexican always eat spicy food.

What is culture?
They are the things that we do not see, like our beliefs or point of view about gender. Culture represents the things we see, the tangible and the intangible. They are things that represent a group of people (society).

Jonatan

For me the English classes were very incredible because they taught me about New York and how life is, find their songs, The city is called New York, I am going to see the information as it is, it is a city that never sleeps, I always go to see New York in Yovana Berenice Lopez Martinez: Life in New York is always very active, it is one of the cities with more than 9 thousand inhabitants where people enjoy distant cultures, American habits are usually similar to British culture, immigrant culture in New York has always been expressed through music, communication, places. The places and the music is an inspiration for the writers, usually the imagination and creativity has inspired all those writers. We generally (WE) always celebrate our deceased being, but Americans celebrate Halloween every October 31th. These two dates are usually similar, but each one has a different meaning. Mexican food is one of the many habits that always differentiates us from other cultures.

Eric Rodriguez Santiago: I will(T) always understand that there will be diversity in all parts of the world since immigration makes the culture of a country spread to other places, but tea time is something typical of an English how to live the nightlife of a inhabitant of New York city. I never imagine how John Lennon could write a song about strawberry hills (SP), but I think it is typical of a artist as well as a writer can be having imagination and motivation.

I understand that I always make habits typical of a mexican, for example, I always eat pozole every september 15 (+) with my family and I always eat pork meat every sunday.

Their initial brainstorm is enriched after to have the differents topic studied the culture during the 4 previous classes. |

Regarding the feedback on written work, according to (4), perhaps the most common way of correcting Ss' work has been to return it to Ss with a great deal of underlining, crossings-out, question marks, and the occasional tick. Nevertheless, in this case, since the beginning of the semester, Ss were provided with an error code in order to recognize it in the body of the writing and know something needs to be corrected. When we use codes, we mark the place where a mistake has been made and use one of the symbols to show what the problem is. The student is now in a position to correct the mistake (7). It has resulted very useful and the Ss have worked comfortably with it. It also helps them work "independently" and realize on their own kinds of mistakes and the frequency they make them.

The following is the error code used from the beginning of the semester:

| Symbol | Meaning |
|--------|------------------------------------|
| SP | incorrect spelling |
| WO | Wrong word order |
| T | Wrong tense |
| WE | Wrong expression |
| – | Something is missing |
| P | Punctuation wrong |
| ? | The idea is not clear. Rewrite it. |

| Ss were expected to produce a linear sequence about culture, habits, icons, and immigrant culture and the way the music influenced it. | Based on the Ss' production, they felt confident enough to write their own opinions and thoughts on culture, habits, icons, immigrant culture. Their initial brainstorm was enriched after watching the documentaries and the music of the different artists and listening to other people giving their opinion. |

As Harmer stated, we give feedback because we want to affect our Ss' language use in the future as well as commenting upon its use in the past. Feedback is part of a learning process, and the learning process is only really finished once the Ss have made the changes.

2.6.9 Final product rubric. Writing.

2.7 Providing feedback.

Regarding the feedback, informal feedback was provided in each session. Ss were corrected while reading, in order to improve pronunciation. On the other hand, they received feedback while writing sentences. Ss were encouraged to make their own decisions in their learning process. Formal feedback also took place when they handed in their final products, they were informed about their performance and their meaningful improvement so that they will not make the same mistakes than before.

2.8 Meaningfulness and usefulness of the designed tests and assessments.

The designed assessment tools were based on the Common European Framework of Reference for Languages (CEFR) so that the Ss abilities were exactly defined as a starting point and to know exactly what they were expected to achieve. It gave the teacher a guideline to identify the Ss achievements in all the different skills according to their A2 level.

An error code was defined in order for the Ss to have the opportunity to check and correct their first draft, read the teacher's notes and suggestions, and then write a second version for their final product. This kind of tool is useful because it allows the Ss to see the kind of mistakes they frequently make and pay attention to how to improve.

The criteria that was selected in the rubrics was intended to evaluate the range of language and vocabulary, the way they are able to organize their own ideas and how well they can achieve the task.

Another important point when designing the assessment tools was organization, the author of this paper categorized from the general criteria to the most specific one, in order to designed detailed tools.

The last but not the least, qualitative results were meaningful after applying the assessment tools due to the Ss said they felt more confident to use the language and were able to identify their own strengths and weaknesses in each activity.

CHAPTER 3. Experience report.

After applying the lesson plan, this is the analysis:

| Expected outcome | Real outcome |
|--|---|
| Ss were expected to be able to define culture and talk about it. | Ss provided the teacher with different examples from the place where they live, their customs and traditional clothes and drinks. |
| Ss were expected to relate images to the cultural concepts from American and British people. | After talking and giving their examples to the teacher in the previous activity, Ss were able to tell the differences between American and British people, by using their background knowledge. |
| Ss were expected to understand the main ideas of a reading and answer the questions with ease. | Even though it took the Ss more time than the expected to answer the questions in the blog, they were able to identify the main idea of the reading and answer correctly. |
| Ss were expected to be familiarized on how to play videos in a website and identify clearly the instructions for the activities. | At the beginning, Ss found it difficult to see their score, however they completed it successfully. |
| Ss were expected to use their background knowledge to talk about immigrant cities and their famous facts. | Ss were able to provide the teacher with some examples to complement the topic. They used their background knowledge from what they had learned in films. |
| Ss were expected to identify key words according to their level in an exercise listening and reading at the same time. | Ss took advantage of having the audio and the text at the same time and were able to finish the activity successfully. |
| Ss were expected to identify common verbs in present simple. | Task achieved successfully. |

| Expected outcome | Real outcome |
|---|--|
| Ss were expected to speak about culture, habits, and facts using simple short sentences using frequency adverbs and present simple. | Ss were able to say short sentences using the frequency adverbs and the present simple. They were provided with informal oral feedback about the word order. |
| Ss were expected to identify key words in authentic material. | The activities dealing with authentic material took Ss twice the time that had been planned. |
| Ss were expected to use a karaoke app with ease. | Ss weren't familiarized with the app and found it difficult to understand. The teacher had to switch the activity in order to work collaboratively. |
| Ss were expected to give their own ideas about what a song writer needs to write a song. | Ss needed guide and a model answer in order to give their own opinion. Nevertheless, they achieved the task successfully. |
| Ss were expected to identify reasons why to move to cosmopolita cities such as New York. | Ss were able to express their excitement about finding 24/7 places and the opportunities they would have. |
| Ss were expected to relate pictures and definitions. | Ss had to work in teams instead of individually. However, working collaboratively was good in order to complete the activity. |
| Ss were expected to summarize the four lessons writing a text using the present simple and the frequency adverbs. | Some Ss received informal feedback and they took advantage of the error code in order to modify their first draft to hand in a good final product. |

CHAPTER 4. Conclusions.

The objective of the present project consisted in developing intercultural awareness by implementing classes via online and integrate the four English skills through the use of technology under the best teaching practices learned in the Specialization. Such objective was fulfilled successfully following the carefully planned steps set in the lesson plan. The study and the analysis of the structure overview of the Common European Framework of Reference for Languages of the current English level of the students were of vital importance in order to determine the skills students are supposed to have and develop according to their A2 level. Another crucial factor was the student's willingness and intrinsic motivation to work online with several apps that they were not familiarized.

Inspiring others getting to know other cultures is one of the most challenging things and it is a life-time opportunity for English as a second language teachers. Teaching the target language by itself is not enough if our objective is to contribute to the actual acquisition and Ss' confidence to not only know how to use the language but when to do it.

In order to talk about interculturality, our Ss should be motivated to define their own culture. The starting point is to be aware of their identity and the identities that are constructed in every cultural group they belong. Defining one's own culture implies to be aware of the similarities and differences we experience with others.

It is expected that the high school students who have participated in this project will, as tourism technicians, be able to use technology to facilitate their work as they develop in their professional lives, and that they will be culturally aware, as they will be interacting with foreign people. Students should be encouraged to be aware of socio-cultural issues and reminded in a way that human interaction and social contact are fundamental. They will not only be asked to speak English when they take a professional exam, for example, but also when they have to interact with people from other countries using English as a lingua franca, and of course when they establish a relationship with them and realize that they come from different backgrounds. Cultural aspects come to the fore when having an ordinary conversation and, in addition, people may follow different social rules. These differences in interaction indicate a cultural situation.

Therefore, Ss should be encouraged to be aware of intercultural matters and think critically about the world.

The role of the teacher when working with cultural awareness is a great responsibility since our Ss will eventually perceive or will be perceived to have different cultural affiliations from other people. Therefore, our Ss should have the capacity to respond respectfully to any kind of situations through the development of some attitudes and knowledge that allow them to understand how to succeed in the relationships with such people. In order to achieve that, Ss are expected to value the others, their beliefs and perspectives. Based on that, the present document addressed the importance of cultural awareness and intercultural competence.

After having exposed Ss to what has been covered in the present document through authentic material that refers to cultural contexts of other places and times, Ss matched the expectations of being genuinely interested in the topic and made an effort to understand the motives of the studied society.

As can be read in the document, the author's teaching philosophy has been polished during the Specialization, it has allowed her to observe herself during the process of learning and teaching at the same time, which was as valuable as exhausting. Besides, she has learned to pay attention to the Ss' needs and notice when the lesson plans need adjustments according to the expected and the real outcomes. It has been a captivating process to remember that when one teaches, one learns not only from the colleagues, but from the Ss.

As for the theoretical foundations that function as the basis for the present project, the linguist Stephen Krashen occupies a prominent place, his research being a fundamental part of remembering that a lowered affective filter enables the acquisition of input. In other words, there are many factors that can influence Ss, such as motivation and self-confidence, factors that were taken into account during the implementation of the lessons to support Ss who feel anxious, to be able to work under a good classroom environment by giving informal feedback without grades in between, letting them realize and express the confidence they feel while performing the activities, offering them extra time to organize their thoughts and ideas before writing and speaking, and letting them know about their performance at each stage of the lessons.

On the other hand, despite the communicative approach does not emphasize on repeating dialogues or grammatical rules, but instead it focuses on fluency and not accuracy and it is useful to fulfill the objectives of the present project, something that can be criticized is the fact that it pursues the Ss' interaction in different contexts such as travelling or business.

Nevertheless, those contexts are not real for the Ss, therefore teachers should adapt the situations to be related to the real Ss' cultural background.

This is important to point out and relevant because after the four sessions considered in the present lesson plan and as they stated in the conclusion collaborative writing, students acknowledge that there are other cultures and are noticeably aware of the importance of valuing each of them. Moreover, the follow-up activities provided additional information about the way students express openness and curiosity towards other ways to get the things done; this is desirable for future class implementations in order to not to focus only on the contents of the syllabus.

Concerning the design of the digital materials used in the lessons, it can be said that they were meant for the students to learn and reinforce the grammatical topic of reported speech and the videos and audios were available to be listened more than once at the students' own pace. On the other hand, they are interactive, providing the Ss with their immediate scores and allowing the teacher to see the Ss responses in real time. The activities have a familiar format for the Ss to be easy to understand. Moreover, every activity was particularly personalized, and they considered at least the visual and auditory learning styles for the different ways Ss process information.

The activities involved everyone in the class and were especially planned to boost student's confidence allowing them to notice not only their weaknesses but their strengths. Furthermore, the activities were the right level for everybody after the arduous research about assessment. On the other hand, each activity was sketched to foster real usage of language thanks to the authentic material and based on the observation of the student's attitudes, it can be said that they were even fun and helped them think critically.

Regarding the several assessment models designed for the present project, it can be said that all the Ss are unique and have different learning needs and styles, therefore they should be told what the teachers exactly expect from them and teachers should also clearly state realistic objectives for every class. As can be seen in the outcomes, it is well known that measuring Ss' learning is not easy, however, teachers should take advantage of the technological innovations that help us save time and see the Ss' performance in real time. On the other hand, self-assessment is not associated with grades, therefore it can be used to provide progress checks and avoid that Ss fall behind in a topic. The results analyzed in the expected and the real outcomes were very consistent with the way the Ss felt while performing each activity and their self-confidence seemed to improve in every stage of the speaking, writing, reading, and listening activities.

In summary, this paper aimed to foster awareness about some characteristics of culture, the reasons why it is considered dynamic and the way it changes as a result of contextual factors. It argued the fact that foreign language teaching and learning is unlikely to be performed effectively without an appropriate understanding of its specific culture. Furthermore, Ss have to get input that will enable them to gain insight into the target culture.

Generally speaking, the project was related to sustain that music should be taken as a cultural exchange, an expression of foreign art since it enriches countries and it contributes with new ideas. On the other hand, the role of music in human culture is something fascinating and it has impacted both, the ideals of young generations and the overall culture, therefore it is an engaging topic for the Ss.

Based on the results of the quantitative and qualitative assessments, the students were curious and understood that they did not have to adapt to the beliefs of other cultures, but that they had to be more critical in order to improve their self-knowledge. They realized that it is not necessary for everyone to think alike, but to show respect for the pluralism of opinions and practices in other places. The students were willing to cooperate and analyze preconceived ideas, different habits, immigrant cultures, cosmopolitan city life, and cultural icons by showing empathy. In essence, students recognized the importance of communicating appropriately, effectively and respectfully. Therefore, these attitudes should be encouraged in subsequent classes.

The city that never sleeps New York

Why?

- ❑ The City That Never Sleeps is a well-known nickname for New York City that was popularized by Frank Sinatra, in the Theme from New York, New York's words.

I want to wake up in a city that never sleeps
And find I'm a number one, top of the list...

- ❑ The city's subway system never closes. It is open 24/7.
- ❑ New York City's free 25 minute Staten Island Ferry operates 24 hours a day, 7 days a week with boats leaving every 15 to 20 minutes during peak hours and every 30 minutes at other times.

British iconic place Strawberry Field.

- ✓ The children's home that inspired The Beatles' famous song Strawberry Fields Forever
- ✓ Music icon John Lennon "found sanctuary" in the gardens of the Strawberry Field home in Woolton, Liverpool as a young boy.
- ✓ Strawberry Field and the original Victorian house were gifted to The Salvation Army in 1934.
- ✓ In 1936 it was opened as a children's home for girls later accepting boys.
- ✓ From then on, for nearly 70 years, it gave some of Liverpool's most vulnerable children a refuge from turmoil and unhappiness – a safe, calm and spiritual home.
- ✓ John Lennon, the days spent playing in The Salvation Army grounds shaped him and inspired his work within the Beatles as an adult.
- ✓ The Salvation Army is a worldwide evangelical Christian church.

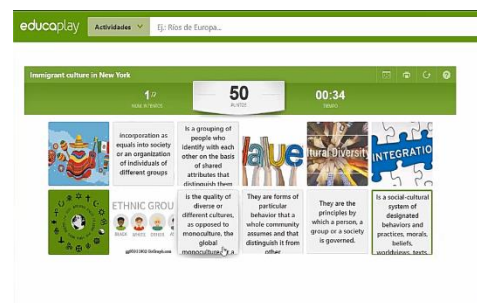

Immigrant culture in New York.

- Nearly a quarter of New York residents are immigrants, while almost one-fifth of residents are native-born U.S. citizens with at least one immigrant parent.
- Nearly three in five immigrants in New York are naturalized U.S. citizens.
- Immigrants in New York are distributed across the educational spectrum.

Reset & song

That's the bomb
(the mix, it's gone eighty-six)

If you don't see
You feel
The deal
You're in New York City
New York City boy
This is your reward day
'Cause you're a New York City boy
Where Seventh Avenue
Broadway
(Then as the evening falls)
You can return to calls
You
The deal
You're a New York City boy
So young
So
Into New York City
New York City
You're new!
'Cause you're a New York City boy
Where Seventh Avenue
Broadway
(New York City)

FACTS ABOUT IN NEW YORK CITY

NEW YORK IS AN IDEAL TO BEARING BECAUSE, BUT A CITY THAT IS...

There is a lot of things that are very interesting about the city, and it is very popular to visit to the city.

The New York City is one of the world's most important cities, with a lot of interesting things to see and do. It is a very important city, and it is very interesting to visit.

It is the most important city in the world, and it is very interesting to visit.

Strawberry Fields History

The history of Strawberry Fields dates all the way back to 1870 when the city was owned by a wealthy English ship named George Warren. On the site, he built a giant gothic mansion that was in line with England's Victorian-era, and with a iron wrought iron gates and flowers. In 1927, another wealthy ship named Alexander C. Mitchell purchased and owned the property. Seven years later Mitchell's Widow sold to the Salvation Army. On July the 7th 1939, the home was opened as an orphanage for up to 40 girls. Two decades later, boys would be allowed in but throughout most of John's childhood, Strawberry Fields was an all girls orphanage. Years later, interviews would reveal that this foreboding, mysterious place had on its walls, writing. In a 1968, Rolling Stone interview, McCartney said that he was trying to write about Liverpool and had ideas of Strawberry Fields because Strawberry Fields is just anywhere you go to. Note that the song title is 'Strawberry Fields', but the actual place is called 'Strawberry Field'.

Lennon would later admit that this was a stylistic choice 'Fields' simply sounded better than 'Field'.

Lennon also admitted to Strawberry Field was a part of his childhood, on the outside boarding but once he climbed over that wall, of wildflowers and beautiful gardens. It's thought that he greatly identified with the boys who lived there, considering that he left abandoned by his parents.

CONCLUSIONS
About the American and British habits, the city that never sleeps, British habits, or immigrant culture in New York.

Estudiante: Amador Juarez Angulo: There's no other city on the planet with an energy that can compare with New York. The fast pace, the housing parks, the hustle and bustle of the people, the 24 hours life, and the creative spirit make New York City one of the most vibrant places in the world. New York neighbors are always good to just other neighbors and to new people who come to live in New York.

Habits in Mexico:

- The Mexicans eat just 3 times per day. All of them.
- Insulted greetings are a strong part of Mexican culture.
- The Mexican always eat salty food.

What is culture?
They are the things that we do not see, like our beliefs or point of view about gender. Culture represents the things we see, the language and the intangible. They are things that represent a group of people (society).

Jonathan:
For me the English classes were very interesting because they taught me about New York and how life is, find their songs. The city is called New York, I am going to see the information as it is, it is a city that never sleeps, I always go to see New York it
